26		TO OBJECTIONS TO ITS PORT OF COMPLIANCE:
27	PROFESSIONAL LEARNING P	LAN FOR TEACHER PROFICIENCY IN
28	USING	TECHNOLOGY

The Court directed the District to prepare and file a notice and report of compliance with its directive to prepare a professional learning plan for teacher proficiency in instructional technology. [ECF 2123 at 140, 151.] The District submitted its professional learning plan on December 6, 2018. [ECF 2152-1.]

The Instructional Technology Department at the District is charged with assessing, developing and implementing professional learning on classroom and instructional technology. The overall plan has the following elements:

8 (a) a specification of the particular instructional technology in which the District
9 expects teachers to develop proficiency in basic Windows computer user operations,
10 smartboard/whiteboards, District student information systems, assessment software,
11 advanced teaching tools available through Microsoft Office 365, and the Microsoft
12 Educator Community (including the curriculum and pedagogical resources available 13 through the MEC);

(b) a technology proficiency evaluation of each teacher, administered throughout the District twice-yearly, with results tracked individually, by school, and district-wide, which is used by the Instructional Technology Department to rate and assess proficiency, and to guide its efforts in professional learning;¹

(c) a detailed description of a well-developed curriculum, its content and multiple modes of delivery for professional learning on instructional technology; and 20 (d) a process, and accompanying rubrics, for assessing the effectiveness of21 professional learning.

The District submits that this is a comprehensive, proper and sufficient plan to provide professional learning on instructional technology to District teachers. Contrary to the Mendoza Plaintiffs' objection, the plan does contain the means to evaluate Teacher Technology Liaisons: the Teacher Technology Survey is aggregated by school,

26

 ¹ The technology proficiency survey has been used by the District for some time, and it has been a major component of the Technology Condition Index since that index was commenced.

so that if a school's aggregate score either dips in overall rating, or fails to progress as 1 expected, the Director of the Instructional Technology Department can either provide 2 remedial coaching to the TTL, or request that the principal of the school designate 3 another TTL. 4

Assessing the actual use of instructional technology in the classroom is beyond 5 the scope of a professional learning plan, and, in any event, is part of overall teacher 6 evaluations conducted each year.² The Danielson framework for teacher evaluation 7 8 includes sections addressing use of technology in the classroom.

9 As noted in the plan, in addition to on-line and live courses, professional learning is provided by TTLs through one-on-one coaching and group instruction through PLCs. 10 This provides opportunities for structured practice and feedback on trained skills. 11

12 Finally, the District notes that much of the instructional technology identified in 13 the plan has now been in use in the District for several years, and that overall proficiency levels have risen, as reported in its annual reports. The District does not 14 believe that there is any systemic or structural issue with its provision of professional 15 learning on instructional technology. There is certainly no suggestion, nor could there 16 be, that professional learning on instructional technology is somehow differentially 17 18 provided in discriminatory fashion, and certainly nothing to suggest a reason or basis for continued supervision in this desegregation case, where the conduct which formed the 19 basis for the Court's decree ended more than fifty years ago, long before the 20instructional technology at issue was conceived. 21

The District respectfully submits that it has complied with the Court's order, and 23 requests that the Court grant partial unitary status in this area of District operations (USP) IX.B.1.iv and IX.B.4). 24

25

Assessing actual use of technology would require classroom observation of 26 each teacher, and the District does not have the resources to conduct separate annual observations of its 2600 teachers regarding use of instructional technology, in addition 27 to the regular annual evaluation of teachers, in which use of technology is already an element. 28
