Dr. Kevin Henry

Assistant Professor of Education Policy Studies and Practice at the University of Arizona's College of Education, Dr. Kevin Lawrence Henry, Jr.'s program of research revolves around two central, interrelated questions. The first question critically examines how power and dominance shape and structure educational policies, practices, and reforms.

The second question is concerned with how educational actors - understand, resist, reconstitute and transform educational fields to be more equitable and socially just. His research pushes the boundaries of understanding state policies on school choice and addresses issues of race, access and poverty in the educational setting.
